The whole point of hiring a cleaning service is to get time back. If you have to take a morning off work to wait for the cleaners, a good part of that benefit disappears. That is why so many clients of The Happy Housekeepers in Roanoke simply leave a key or a door code and get on with their day, coming home to a finished house.

Getting Your Time Back

This works because the company bonds and insures its employees itself. It is not relying on each individual cleaner to carry their own coverage. The company's website states plainly that because employees are bonded and insured by the company, customers do not need to be present while the work is being done. That kind of protection gives homeowners the confidence to schedule visits during the workday, while traveling or while running errands https://ameblo.jp/caidenujxd355/entry-12985256761.html around town.

Busy professionals who commute downtown or out toward Salem often choose weekly or bi-weekly visits while they are at the office. Families in Cave Spring schedule cleanings during school hours. Frequent travelers in Hollins book a visit for the day before they return so the house is fresh when they walk in. Retirees often head out for lunch or cleaning service Roanoke a walk on the Roanoke River Greenway and come back to clean floors and sparkling bathrooms.

If there are particular instructions, such as pets to keep in a certain room, a security system to reset or a specific product to use on hardwood floors, the office will note them during the free estimate. After your first cleaning, someone will call to make sure everything was handled as you expected. That follow-up has been part of the business since founder Mary Jane Wszolek started it in 1979, and it remains a habit under President Paula Anderson today.

Commercial clients benefit in the same way. Corporate Clean crews can work after hours in executive offices, general offices and medical facilities, with a supervisor always on call. Office managers do not need to stay late, and staff arrive in the morning to a clean workplace. The company is licensed, bonded and insured and has held BBB accreditation since 1993 with an A+ rating.

Security is something the office takes seriously, too. Keys and access codes are handled carefully, and you can talk through how you would like the crew to enter and leave your home during the estimate. Some clients prefer a lockbox, others leave a key with the office, and some simply provide a garage code. Whatever you choose, the arrangement is recorded so each visit goes smoothly and your home stays secure.
