Istanbul film festival in april 2008

The first section when film-makers were expected to send their works ended in December and the Staff is now undergoing all preparations to be ready by April for this 2008 Film Festival. The organization estimates that for this festival there will be around 200 films competing for different sections. Here the list:International Competition section, reserved for feature length shared transfer Masai Mara safari fiction or documentary films or masai mara group joining safari animations. In order to be included in this section and compete for the “Golden Tulip” award, authors/film-makers have to focus their attention on themes on “arts” or “the artist”, and literary adaptations.There is a particular section where films shown in other leading festivals (including many award-winning) will be projected at the World of Festivals Section In competition also the films at the Human Rights in Cinema Section that comprises both documentaries and features investigating the politics behind social and individual life changes. Documentaries Other NON-competitive sections are the Retrospective section & the Tributes section where tributes to a film-maker influential to film history are selected, The Mined Zone section reserved for innovative, unconventional and unique fiction films in terms of style or content and Masters of the Future Section featuring works by new directors who received critical acclaim

Beside the International competition theres also the National Competition for recent Turkish films: Turkish Cinema.As the Istanbul International Film festival keeps evolving every year, the sections of the festival are of course subject to change.For further information please visit IKSV web site.To organize your trip in Istanbul, (Turkey) there are many free and useful tools on-line, from city guide to ticket-bookers, to accommodations advices and flight reservations. In the words of French poet Alphonse de Lamartine, if one had but a single glance to give the world, one should gaze on Istanbul. Indeed, this is a city of astonishing beauty. Its architecture, cuisine, history and culture make up a fascinating tapestry of yesterday and very much tomorrow. A metropolitan capital with an imperial history stretching back for over 1500 years, Istanbul is today the commercial, historical and cultural core of Turkey. But most of all, its a buzzing, living-breathing metropolis that is knocking at the doors of the European Union. It wont be hard to find a suitable accommodation (there are many youth hostels for backpackers or travellers on a budget up to enchanting hotels featuring Turkish interior designs, typical pieces of furniture, mosaics, spa and thermal baths at affordable prices). We found some in this website (Flashbooking) featuring gorgeous views over Bosporus and Istanbul Blue Mosque and markets.
