Reunion Planning Tips

Start by gathering a headcount early, since reunion numbers can change quickly once word spreads. Set up a simple schedule with a meal, a group photo and an open block of time for catching up. Assign a family member to handle name tags or a memory table with old photos, and ask a few relatives to bring lawn games for the kids. A wide covered porch and a fire pit give the older generation a comfortable place to tell stories while younger cousins explore the open space around the barn and pavilion. End the day with a group photo on the porch, with the mountains behind the whole family, and you will have a picture that gets passed around for years.
