There is a reason so many couples in Southwest Virginia want the Blue Ridge Mountains in the background of their wedding photos. The ridgelines change color with the seasons and the time of day, and no backdrop you could rent will ever match them. Bailey Wick Farm Wedding & Event Venue in Fincastle offers that mountain view to couples coming from Daleville, just about ten miles to the south.

The venue describes its setting as tranquil, with beautiful views of the Blue Ridge Mountains, and the people who have celebrated there agree. Reviews mention breathtaking mountain views and a sunset that guests could not stop talking about. If you have ever watched the light go gold over the hills on a summer evening intimate wedding venues near me in Botetourt County, you know exactly what they mean.

Planning around the view is simple. Many couples choose a late afternoon ceremony outdoors so the sun is lower and softer, then move to the wide covered porch for cocktails as the sky changes. By the time dinner is served in the barn, the mountains are glowing in the last light, and your photographer has had a full hour of the best conditions of the day.

The view also works on overcast days. Low clouds over the ridges can look dramatic in photos, and the barn's heating, air conditioning and gas log fireplace keep everyone comfortable no matter what the sky is doing. With rocking chairs on the porch and a fire pit outside, guests have several places to settle in and enjoy the scenery.

Photographing the View

If you are hiring a photographer from Daleville or Roanoke, invite them to visit the farm before the wedding, ideally at the same time of day as your ceremony. They can find the angles where the ridgelines line up behind you and plan where to stand for family portraits. A short scouting trip often pays for itself in the final gallery, especially at a venue where the landscape plays such a big role. Ask them to look at the porch, the barn doors and the open field so you have a few options if the light shifts.

Couples from Daleville who want to see the view for themselves can text or call (540) 293-7308 to arrange a visit. The family takes inquiries Monday through Sunday.
