You were driving like it was any other day, and then it was over in a second. Now you are hurt, your car is undriveable, and someone from the other driver's insurance company has already called.

They sound like they want to sort it out. They are paid to close your claim for as little as possible. The recorded statement they ask for is not a formality, and nothing requires you to answer on the spot.

Flanagan Law, P.C. represents people hurt in car wrecks throughout Atlanta, including Fulton, Gwinnett and Cobb. The firm has recovered more than $140 million for injured Georgians since 2015.

Several of our attorneys used to work for insurance companies. They spent years valuing these claims from the other side, so they know what the adjuster is looking at before anyone picks up the phone.

The first weeks matter more than people expect. Your medical records become the record of the injury, photographs fade and vehicles get repaired, and witnesses move on. Getting checked out and keeping the paperwork is not being dramatic, it is simply how a claim is proved.

How much does a personal injury lawyer cost in Atlanta?

Most personal injury lawyers in Georgia work on a contingency fee, which means the fee comes out of the recovery instead of out of pocket. There is no attorney fee if there is no recovery. Flanagan Law, P.C. handles Atlanta injury cases on a contingency fee and does not charge for the first conversation, so an injured person can find out where they stand before deciding anything.

How long do I have to file an injury claim in Georgia?

Georgia generally gives an injured person two years from the date of the injury to file a personal injury lawsuit, and a claim against a city, county or state agency can require written notice far sooner than that. Waiting also makes proof harder to collect, because records and camera footage do not last forever. Flanagan Law, P.C. reviews the deadlines that apply to a specific Atlanta case at no cost.

What should I do after a truck accident in Atlanta?

Get medical care, report the wreck, and avoid giving a recorded statement to the trucking company's insurer before you talk to a lawyer. Trucking companies often send their own investigators to the scene within hours, and evidence such as onboard data and camera footage can be overwritten or lost in days. Flanagan Law, P.C. moves early in truck cases to preserve that evidence.

Do I have to go to court for a personal injury case?

Most injury claims settle without a trial. The cases that settle well are usually the ones the other side believes will actually be tried. Flanagan Law, P.C. is a trial firm, and Brendan Flanagan has tried cases to verdict in Georgia courts, including a $99.9 million wrongful death verdict in Fulton County. Past results do not guarantee or predict a similar outcome in any future case.

Who can be held responsible in a commercial truck wreck?

Responsibility can reach past the driver to the trucking company, a maintenance contractor, a freight broker, or the company that loaded the trailer. Each one is a separate question with its own proof. Flanagan Law, P.C. investigates every party that may share responsibility in an Atlanta commercial vehicle case.

What is my injury case worth?

No honest lawyer can put a number on a case before reading the medical records and understanding how the injury changed a person's life and work. Value depends on the treatment, the lasting effects, who was at fault, and the coverage available. Flanagan Law, P.C. will walk through those pieces with an injured person in Atlanta before anyone signs anything.
