

Rideshare Accident Claims in Midland TX A rideshare crash in Midland can involve more insurance policies than an ordinary wreck, and sorting out which one pays first is often the hardest part. The Uber or Lyft driver may carry a personal auto policy. The rideshare company carries its own coverage, and whether it applies can depend on whether the app was on, whether a trip had been accepted and whether a passenger was in the car. If another driver caused the crash, that driver's insurer comes into play too. Your own policy, including any uninsured or underinsured motorist coverage you did not reject in writing, may also matter. Passengers are often in a strong position, because they rarely share any blame for the crash. Still, a passenger hurt on Loop 250 north or on the way home from Midland International Air and Space Port can find that three adjusters each point at someone else. Other drivers hit by a rideshare vehicle face a similar puzzle. Texas is an at-fault state, so the question of who caused the crash drives everything, and the driver's app status at that exact moment can change which company answers the claim. Pedestrians and cyclists struck in downtown Midland or along Big Spring Street run into the same tangle of coverage.

What should you not tell your insurance company after a crash? Avoid apologizing, guessing about speed or distances, or saying you feel fine before a doctor has checked you. Anything you say in a recorded statement can be used to argue you share the blame, which matters under Texas rules that cut your recovery by your percentage of fault. The Doan Law Firm can handle those calls for you from the start. What is the biggest mistake people make with a car accident claim? Delaying medical treatment is one of the most costly. The Doan Law Firm documents both economic losses and non-economic harm, such as pain, mental anguish and physical impairment, before negotiating with insurers. What is the hardest injury to prove after a car accident? Injuries that don't show up on an X-ray, like whiplash, soft tissue damage, mild traumatic brain injury and post-crash anxiety, are often the hardest to prove. Consistent treatment records, doctor notes and a daily pain journal help. The Midland team investigates beyond the police report to build evidence that insurers can't easily dismiss. Can I get compensation for anxiety after a car accident? Yes, Texas law allows recovery for mental anguish when it is tied to the crash and properly documented. Fear of driving, trouble sleeping and panic attacks after a wreck on I-20 or SH 191 are real harms. The Doan Law Firm can connect clients with trusted medical professionals so these effects are recorded and valued fairly. How likely is it to get sued after a car accident in Midland? Most crash claims settle through insurance without anyone being personally sued, especially when the at-fault driver carries at least the Texas minimum of 30/60/25 coverage.
