A brand new home should feel brand new on move-in day. Too often, though, buyers walk into a fresh build and find drywall dust in the cabinets, stickers on the windows and fine grit on every floor. New construction house cleaning in Roanoke closes that gap. The Happy Housekeepers offers builder and contractor cleaning among its services and has been working across the Roanoke Valley since 1979.

Construction leaves behind a specific kind of mess. Sanding and cutting create fine dust that floats through the whole house and settles on window sills, door frames, baseboards and inside closets. Paint specks land on floors and trim, and adhesive residue lingers on counters and fixtures. Ordinary household cleaning products and a quick wipe rarely get it all.

For builders and contractors, a dependable cleaning partner matters. A final clean is the last step before a walkthrough, and the condition of the home shapes the buyer's first impression of the builder's work. Customer reviews for The Happy Housekeepers mention a walkthrough inspection, with team member Tony named in that context, which reflects the attention to detail these jobs require.

The cleaning itself covers the whole house. Carpets are vacuumed and hard floors mopped, often more than once to lift construction dust. Window sills, baseboards, blinds and ceiling fans are dusted, and kitchens and bathrooms receive complete clean-ups so new counters, sinks and tubs shine. Specialized services like washing walls and woodwork and cleaning light fixtures help remove dust from freshly painted surfaces and newly installed lighting.

New construction is common in parts of Roanoke County, Salem and the outer edges of Vinton, and homeowners who build custom homes can book this service directly too. A thorough post-construction clean is a nice way to mark the end of a long building project.

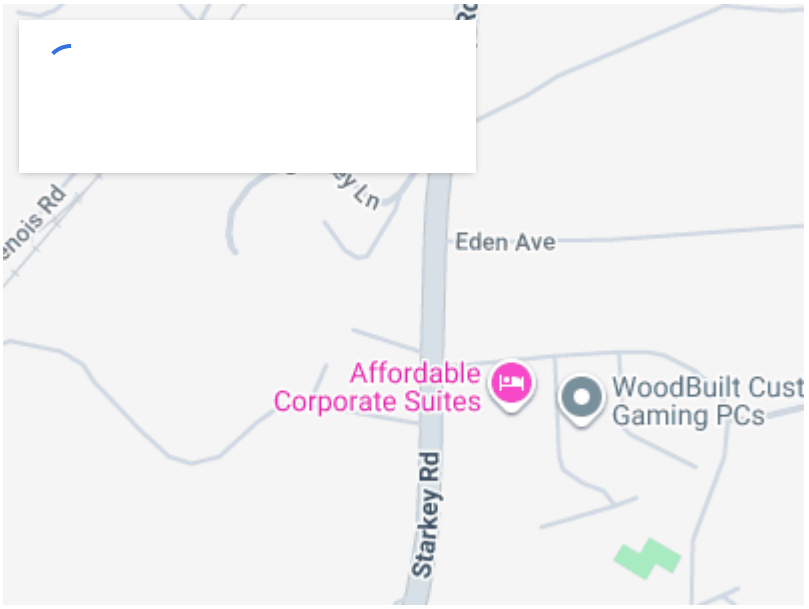

The Happy Housekeepers is licensed, bonded and insured, and staff are bonded and insured by the company. The business holds a BBB blue seal and offers free, no-obligation estimates. Once the family moves in, the company can continue with weekly, bi-weekly or monthly house cleaning.
